Chickens are coming to Mount Vernon

Mount Vernon staff is excited to announce that there are currently 39 chicken eggs incubating in the building that are due to hatch around March 21. Last week, students met with our GATE teacher to learn about how the baby chicks develop inside the egg, see an egg being candled and learn about the opportunities they will have to interact with the chickens in the future.

Once the eggs hatch, and the chickens are feathered, some will live in a coup outside of Mount Vernon where students will have the opportunity to continue learning about them. If you are interested in helping us to build the coup, please use the QR code above to see how you can help.

Over the next few weeks, we will be sharing additional information about how your family can watch the hatching process, naming the chickens, how students will interact with the chickens, and what we will do with the eggs once our hens begin to produce them.
